THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

MESSAGE TO NATIONAL MODEL UNITED NATIONS KOREA (NMUN-KOREA).
Songdo, 24 November-2 December 2013

Your participation in this Model UN comes at a time when the international community increasingly recognizes the power of young people to change our world. I regret I could not be with you in person, but extend a personal welcome to my home country of South Korea where I too was once a Model UN delegate.

I am proud to have appointed the first-ever United Nations Envoy on Youth, Ahmad Alhindawi a 29 year-old leader from Jordan. He will be an advocate who will stand up for your interests and advise me on how we can best respond to issues of concern to the world's young people.

The United Nations has also created a dedicated trust fund to boost youth volunteerism and harness the energy of young people from different countries to help us reach our global development goals.

These and other measures aimed at empowering young people are part of our effort to enlist youth in helping to address the turmoil and uncertainty that grip much of our world. From tense transitions and armed conflict, to economic and environmental distress across the globe, we are being tested every minute of every day.

I am calling on governments to help us stop moving from crisis to crisis and instead address the underlying causes and inter-relationships. At the same time, we know that lasting solutions to global problems no longer lie in the hands of governments alone. The United Nations of the 21st century is advancing through networks and coalitions. We need you to be a full partner in our campaign for a better world.

I have met countless people over the course of my career whose dedication to public service could be traced back to when, at your age, they attended a conference where students debated international issues under the blue UN flag.

I count on you to use the negotiating skills you learn in Model UN to help navigate the real-world problems we face. Join forces with likeminded individuals and groups to promote understanding and generate positive change. Link to the United Nations through our Twitter and Facebook accounts. Continue to draw on the experience to help and inspire others. This will enrich you as individuals and enhance our common future.

Ban Ki-moon

Greetings delegates, faculty and friends,

On behalf of Yonsei University, it is a great pleasure to welcome you to the National Model United Nations (NMUN)- Korea 2013. It is an honor to host such a prestigious event at Yonsei's International Campus in Songdo, and I am amazed to be in the presence of such a globally diverse audience. I would like to extend a sincere welcome to the international delegates of 14 nationalities from institutions around the globe.

60 years after the Korean War, South Korea found itself reveling in unprecedented prosperity and international stature – we've come here through nothing short of a miracle. In just a few decades, this war-torn country had uplifted itself from poverty, and we now compete at the forefront of global excellence, spearheading initiatives towards collective well-being and bridging differences between developed and developing countries as a middle nation that straddles both worlds.

NMUN-Korea 2013 is yet another testament to this rapid ascent, as South Korea is now host to one of the oldest and most prestigious Model United Nations conferences after fierce competition with other countries. This privilege was gained by accentuating the role the United Nations (UN) has played in the nation's inception and ascent, and the role South Korea now plays within the UN as a rising global leader. In addition, this year commemorates a milestone in the longstanding history of South Korea's global accomplishments; the year 2013 marks the 50th year anniversary of EU-South Korean diplomatic relations and also the year the Global Climate Fund finally nestles into the Songdo International Complex. The fact that NMUN-Korea 2013 will be hosted in Songdo this November commemorates these landmark events and also epitomizes the country's rapid ascent to global recognition.

I am greatly confident that NMUN-Korea 2013 will become a great success. World renowned speakers, accomplished scholars and student leaders from all corners of the world will congregate to discuss matters of global issues in the fields of international crime, regional security, sustainable development and disaster relief. The Convensia will bustle about with the dynamic energy generated by this wealth of talent. Imagine how exciting it will be to have global leaders from Ghana, Poland, Canada, and China gather in Songdo to discuss the security predicament of the Korean Peninsula.

I sincerely hope that delegates can appreciate the true value of this year's conference. It has meaning beyond college-level academic activities – it is a showcase of Korea's global leadership, a hub of international talent and an opportunity to meet and interact with the global leaders of the future.

I wish the delegates the best of luck!

Kap-Young Jeong
President, Yonsei University

Dear participants,

On behalf of the Yonsei Leadership Center, it is my greatest pleasure to welcome you to the National Model United Nations – Korea 2013 in Songdo International City.

NMUN-Korea 2013 is the coalition work of two different organizations, the National Collegiate Conference Association and the Yonsei Leadership Center. Founded in 2001, the Yonsei Leadership Center is an institution that specializes university level leadership research and education, the first of its kind in Korea. For over a decade, we have supported a variety of creative programs in leadership education, international relations, community service, and student-led activities in order to foster global leaders at high standards of intellectual level and virtue.

Under the main theme of "The United Nations' Legacy in South Korea", NMUN-Korea 2013 is fully packed with exciting events, animated discussion, and the chance to meet amazing delegates from all over the world. The conference bridges the past of a war-torn nation ruined by the Korean War to the present wealthy developed nation which goes above and beyond globally substantial economic standards. Let this be a chance to communicate with students of diverse backgrounds and to expand your global talents and diplomatic skills. At this place, at this moment, you will take one step further into becoming the global leaders responsible for our collective future. Such an opportunity is difficult to come by. I hope you make the most out of it.

Once again, welcome to NMUN-Korea 2013. I sincerely wish that the conference program and your stay in Songdo International City prove memorable.

Dear participants,

On behalf of the conference organizers, I welcome you to Songdo, South Korea, and to NMUN-Korea 2013. Since December last year, a committed network bridged the Pacific Ocean, painstakingly etching out blueprints, logistically animating them to life and then ironing out the details so that your expectations can be not only matched, but even surpassed. This conference is our cherished brainchild, and it is with both excitement and trepidation that I present the end product of our labor of love. Although wary of seeming brash, I dare say that the forthcoming days should unfold to your satisfaction.

"A leader is a dealer in hope." The leadership of our times finds form in neither hegemonic brutality nor preponderant wealth, but the narratives of hope which inspire and make aspire. Case in point: the Dalai Lama and Aung San Suu Kyi. We will narrate Korea's ascent like an old warhorse, but not out of vain exceptionalism or chauvinistic hubris, but out of the belief that Korea's story is not ours alone to relish. In fact, we have faith in its compelling inspiration.

South Korea's rapid ascent from the ashes of tragic fraternal strife would not have been possible if not for the help of international solidarity. Keeping this kindness in mind, it has recently taken on the mantle of international leadership under UN stewardship, carrying its weight in the areas of development and climate change in particular. Songdo bears testament to its dedication. In many ways, South Korea is a scintillating example of all that is great about multilateral engagement. It is also nothing short of a miracle; at a more personal level, it teaches the strength of sheer human will: that anything is possible if you will it strongly enough.

We wanted to share this story because it is a story worth being told.

So many people have contributed to this conference: most importantly, the NMUN-Korea 2013 Organizing Committee, the Yonsei Institute of East and West Studies Leadership Center, the National Collegiate Conference Association and the NMUN-Korea Secretariat. I thank the indefatigable spirit and dedication everyone has shown in the lead-up to this conference. I'm outright embarrassed to hog the spotlight, as this conference was by no means a solitary endeavor. There are so many other contributors who will not be explicitly recognized in this book, but have pitched in all the same. Both you and I are heavily indebted to each and every one of these talented people.

I hope this conference proves as powerfully transforming for you as it was for me. I also hope that you leave with fond memories and a friend from every stretch of the world.

Best of luck,
Helen Hyun Hwa Lee

11:00am to 12:00 Information Booths (Snack Served), G-Tower Look-Around

Program: Representatives from three of the UN offices snuggled into Songdo's international cornerstone – the G-Tower – have offered to share two hours of their precious time in order to make time for NMUN-Korea's delegate body. They will each introduce their respective organizations, provide insight about working in the UN and give advice on preparing for a life-long career in the field. Their insights will be followed by a Q&A session. After the official program comes to an end, you can take your questions to the UN booths, which will be staffed by UN workers eager to offer answers. Come to learn more about what it takes to work in the UN!

* The INGO Visits Program has been arranged by the Incheon International Relations Fondation.

9:30 to 10:30 Guest Speaker's lecture
10:30 to 11:00 Q&A Session

Program: In the delegate seminar program, prominent experts in the fields of humanitarian challenges and North Korea will be invited to hold lectures and provide informative sessions for the delegates. This will enhance the delegates' understanding of the agenda at hand, thereby elevating the quality of session debate. Sufficient time will be secured so that the speakers can address the delegates' most pressing questions. These seminars are meant to be interactive and designed so that delegates can make the most out of the experience. You can take great advantage of the lectures and exert your opinion on the pending issue as well. Do not miss the chance to interact with leading scholars and experts.

Dirk Hebecker / "Global Humanitarian Challenges"

Mr.Dirk Hebecker is currently the head of the UNHCR Sub-Office in Korea. He has more than twenty years of professional experiences in the United Nations and has strived to improve global humanitarian and human right issues. He graduated from Moscow State Institute of International Relations (University) MFA Russia. His field experiences will inspire many prospective diplomats and future global leaders who wish to work in human right issues.

John Delury / "The Rational Irrationality of North Korea"

Professor Delury is currently an assistant professor of Chinese Studies in Yonsei University Graduate School of International Studies. He obtained a Ph.D. in history from Yale University. He is an expert scholar in North East Asian studies and he concurrently served as a director to the North Korea Inside Out Task Force along with the China Boom Project.

SIGHTSEEING & SHOPPING

Central Park is a large green oasis located in the midst of the skyscrapers of Songdo. There are five theme parks, and artificial seaways flow through the park. If you want to enjoy water sports, visit the West Boat House in Central Park.

Tri-Bowl is the first architectural work in the world with a narrower bottom and a wider top. This creates the illusion that the three bowls are floating on the water.

Haedoji Park The scenic view created by wind turbines is beautiful. Visitors can walk, run, and ride bicycles on the well-constructed tracks. Bicycle rentals are available.

Compact Smart City is an exhibition center where visitors can view the history of Incheon and the construction process of the Songdo International City.

G-Tower Observatory Visitors can enjoy the beautiful view of Songdo on the 29th Floor of G-Tower. However, it is closed on weekends.

Canal Walk is a European-style shopping mall whose entire blocks run 740 meters long. The long central waterways flow among the buildings with architecture suggesting the four seasons.

Incheon Bridge Observatory is the best point for visitors to see the biggest and longest bridge in Korea. The view is especially wonderful at sunset over the West Sea.

DELEGATES

While participating in the National Model UN conference, delegates have a responsibility to always maintain the highest level of professionalism and diplomacy. Conference staff, faculty advisors and fellow delegates should be treated with the highest level of courtesy and respect. Professionalism in speech, actions, and appearance by delegates is a requirement of this conference, and necessary to its educational mission. It is assumed that all delegates will respect the property of the United Nations, Convensia and the host hotel.

NMUN reserves the right to restrict future registration for any participant or school, whose delegates or faculty advisors are not able to uphold their responsibility to the conference's code of conduct.

Delegates are expected to:

- Remain "in character" by consistently advocating the interests and representing the policies of the country assigned. To act "in character" also entails displaying respect for the opinions and ideas of fellow delegates, even if these opinions and ideas conflict with a given delegate's own country's priorities.
- Collaborate with fellow delegates when possible.
- Be courteous and professional at all times.
- Attend all committee sessions.
- Avoid the consumption of alcohol and other drugs in committee sessions. Any issues related to illicit drugs will be immediately directed to the attention of local authorities.

Delegates who disrupt committee sessions or create problems in the hotel may be barred from further participation in the conference.

Delegates are encouraged to enjoy the variety of activities available at our conference venues. Please bear in mind, however, the purpose of being here is participation in NMUN and failure to attend committee sessions may result in your withdrawal from the conference.

If you are going to drink, please drink responsibly. Excessive alcohol consumption should be avoided.

HEAD DELEGATES

Head delegates provide leadership to their delegates and to other delegations by serving as information resources. They should attend and participate in head delegate meetings. Head delegates may be assigned to a committee or may serve solely in an advisory role. Head delegates assigned to a committee should observe the delegate code of conduct. Those not assigned to a particular committee should interact with delegates as would a faculty advisor.

FACULTY ADVISORS

The role of faculty advisors, while at the conference, is to make all efforts to see that their students maintain a positive and professional approach to the conference. The educational quality of the conference is primarily dependent on the active and professional participation of all delegates. Faculty advisors can ensure this by monitoring the attendance of their students at committee meetings and helping them understand the skills of diplomacy as practiced at National Model United Nations. Faculty advisors must maintain the highest level of professionalism toward all conference participants and staff.

During the conference, faculty advisors are encouraged to advise students on specific questions such as a state's policy or issues of international law, but must not participate in the actual writing of resolutions or caucusing activities. NMUN allows students an opportunity to demonstrate their preparation and research skills. While faculty advisors are encouraged to observe their students from the back of committee rooms, participation in the committee process must be left to the student delegates and the conference staff.

Faculty Advisors are expected to:

- Provide leadership to their delegates and to other delegations by serving as information resources when appropriate.
- Respond to questions and concerns without interfering with the work of the committees or the deliberations of delegates, whether in formal session or in caucus.
- Refrain from using academic credit and grading policies that force participation beyond that country's normal position in the UN.
- Remind their delegates of the educational purpose of the simulation. Awards should not be a delegation's main emphasis.
- Attend and participate in faculty advisors meetings.
- Offer suggestions and assistance to new faculty advisors.

DRESS CODE

All clothing must adhere to guidelines that portray professionalism and modesty. If a delegate's attire is deemed inappropriate by NMUN staff, the delegate will be asked to leave the session and return with appropriate attire.

- Standard delegate attire for the conference is business jacket, slacks (or skirts for women), dress shirt (with tie for men) and dress shoes.
- Dress sweaters, shorts, ball caps, jeans, sneakers and sunglasses are considered too casual. Clothes that expose excessive bare skin or are otherwise revealing are inappropriate.
- It is not appropriate for delegates to display any national symbols such as flags, pins, crests, etc. on their person during sessions. UN symbols are acceptable.

Western business dress is preferred. Traditional dress is only permitted for international delegates in whose native countries "professional business dress" includes traditional cultural dress. NMUN will not tolerate any delegate's attempt to portray a "character" using traditional cultural attire as costume.

As role models for delegates, volunteer staff, faculty advisors and guests are required to dress in western business attire while participating in scheduled conference sessions.

SEXUAL HARASSMENT / DISCRIMINATION POLICY

It is the intention of the NCCA that the environment of National Model United Nations supports our educational goal. The organizers will not tolerate any instances of discrimination based on race, color, sex, sexual orientation, national origin, religion, age or disability.

If any delegate, staff or advisor believes they have encountered discrimination, which results in a hostile working environment or disparate treatment, they must bring it to the attention of the Secretary-General of the conference. In the event that this is not possible, they must bring it to the attention of the organizers. The NCCA will investigate the merits of the allegations, interviewing all parties involved.

Based on the findings, organizers may:

- take no action
- issue a verbal reprimand
- separate the individual from the conference
- implement any other action deemed appropriate

For more details on NMUN Policies/Codes of Conduct and the procedure for addressing violations visit: nmun.org/policies_codes.html.

Delegation Awards

National Model United Nations has established criteria for evaluating delegate performance. Each element is equally important to the overall awards determination process. All committees are weighted equally, and delegations are rated on a mathematical formula in relation to the total number of committees represented by the individual Member State.

Areas of evaluation are:

- Remaining in character – defined as advocating your assigned country's position in a manner consistent with economic, social and geopolitical constraints.
- Participating in committee – evaluated both during formal sessions and caucusing.
- Proper use of the rules of procedure – NMUN uses the rules of procedure to facilitate effective workings of committee and debate.
